PRESIDENT BAER VISITING FIELD

George F. Baer, President of Reading Railroad, Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, Noted Physician and Novelist are in Gettysburg.

President George F. Baer, of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, arrived in Gettysburg by special train shortly after half past twelve this afternoon with a party of friends among whom are the following:

Dr. S. Weir Mitchell of Philadelphia, physician and novelist. Colonel Shore, an officer in the English Army. General Charles Francis Adams. General John M. Wilson. Mr. John Cadwalader, of Philadelphia.

Dr. W. F. Muhlenberg, a Reading physician and a former Gettysburgian. Theodore Voorhes, first vice president of the Reading. Agnew T. Dice, general manager of the Reading.

The train was made up of a day coach and two of the Reading's private cars, "Schuykill" and "Philadelphia" the latter being the special car of the president of the road. Some time after arriving the train was placed on the side track at the station where it will remain until Saturday when the return trip to Philadelphia will be made.

President Baer and his guests are living in their cars and the trip over the battlefield was made in automobiles of Edgar A. Crouse and George J. Bushman. The party did not desire the services of guides, the trip over the field being started after luncheon had been served.

15 MINISTERS GET DIPLOMAS

Eighty Sixth Annual Commencement of Lutheran Theological Seminary of this Place Held in College Church.

The eighty sixth commencement of the Theological Seminary was held in College Church on Thursday evening when fifteen young ministers received their diplomas. Of the graduates two will enter foreign missionary work, two will work at home mission stations, three will take up post graduate work; one will be assistant to Dr. Granville at Gettysburg and seven have accepted charges.

Thursday evening four of the class delivered theses, Paul F. Bloomhardt on "The Authority of Creeds," G. Raymond Haaf on "The Objective Influence of Prayer," Norman G. Phillips, on "The Permanent Value of the Old Testament," and Edgar E. Snyder on "What of the Denominational College."

Several musical numbers on the program were given by Miss Ruth Clutz and Miss Heba Miller. The presentation of diplomas was by Dr. J. A. Singmaster, chairman of the faculty.

The two young graduates who will take up foreign missionary work are, Rev. Joseph Arnold, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who will sail for Liberia, South Africa, in July to take up work at the Muhlenberg Mission, and Rev. G. Raymond Haaf, of Elmer, N. J., who will go as a missionary to Guntur, India. Rev. J. Barren Swope, of Turbotville, has accepted a home mission appointment to Kalamazoo, Michigan, and Rev. Will M. Seligman, of this place, has taken the Cold Springs Mission for a year. This also includes active work at the Mont Aito Sanitarium.

Rev. Paul F. Bloomhardt, of Altoona, is one of the three to take up post-graduate work in the fall. Rev. N. G. Phillips, of Greencastle, will pursue post-graduate work at Gettysburg College next year and will be the athletic coach at the institution while carrying on his work for the degree of master of arts. Rev. George L. Kieffer will likely take up similar work at Gettysburg College next year. During the Summer he will be engaged in Chautauqua work and other activities.

Rev. S. Franklin Snyder, of Indiana, will be in Gettysburg much of the time, having accepted the position of assistant to President Granville. The members of the class who have accepted charges are Rev. C. F. V. Hesse, of Coatesville, who will go to Shrewsbury; Rev. William N. King, of Chicago, to Rock Grove, Illinois; Rev. Robert E. Peterman, of Hanover, who will go to McConnellsburg; Rev. Ralph R. Rudolph, of Allentown, who has accepted a call to Lemoyne; Rev. Edgar E. Snyder, of Everett, who has accepted election as pastor of a Harrisburg church; Rev. Simon Snyder, of Clear Spring, who will go to Sculp Level.

DROPPED FALSE TEETH

As stated previously in this paper, Arthur Noel, of Bonneauville, was held up near his home at a late hour last Saturday night by three men. Two of them endeavored to get hold of the bridle of the horse, which Mr. Noel was driving. Mr. Noel applied the whip freely, when the horse made a plunge and took the driver a safe distance from the would-be highwaymen.

On Wednesday, Horace Heltzel, of Bonneauville, passed the place where the attempted hold-up occurred, and found a set of false teeth. The supposition is that they belong to one of the "hold-up men." Mr. Heltzel says the owner can have the teeth by calling at his home.

COUNTY MAN MET TERRIBLE DEATH

Charles Cashman, Former Bendersville Butcher, Falls beneath Wheels of Moving Train and is Killed Instantly.

Charles W. Cashman, a former resident of Bendersville, was instantly killed Thursday in Harrisburg when he fell from a moving car and tumbled under the wheels. Mr. Cashman was one of the best known engineers on the Philadelphia and Reading Railway system.

Engineer Cashman, who had a fast freight run between Rutherford and Port Richmond, completed his return trip about 2 o'clock Thursday morning and, after making his report, remarked to another engineer that he would take a freight into the junction, as he wanted to hurry home. That was the last Engineer Cashman was seen alive.

A half hour later a telephone message announced that his dead body had been found at the west end of the yard badly mangled.

Mr. Cashman was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Cashman now deceased. He was for many years a resident of this county, conducting a farm along Marsh Creek for several years and then engaging in the butchering business at Bendersville. Some years ago he went to Harrisburg to engage in railroad work. He was 46 years old and leaves his wife, who before marriage was Miss Sara Eicholtz, a daughter of ex Sheriff Eicholtz. He also leaves a son, Chalmers Cashman; two brothers and a sister, Dr. E. W. Cashman, of York Springs; Harry Cashman, of Iowa; and Mrs. Samuel Taylor, of Harrisburg.

The body will leave Harrisburg at noon Saturday and be taken to Bendersville arriving at that place at 12 p. m. The funeral will take place immediately upon the arrival of the train and interment will be made at Bendersville. Friends are requested to attend without further notice.

MRS. M'CABE WAS NOT MURDERED

Autopsy over Body of Pen Mar Woman about whose Death there was Some Mystery, Showed it Came from Natural Cause.

Mrs. Carrie McCabe, wife of Captain Harry McCabe, whose dead body was found in a bungalow at Pen Mar on April 20th, was not murdered.

An autopsy held in Baltimore on Thursday by one of the most eminent surgeons of the city settles that conclusively.

Mr. McCabe, husband of the woman, states that he is entirely satisfied with the result of the post mortem and feels sure now that his poor wife was neither mistreated nor did she die from violence.

Coroner J. P. Maclay and District Attorney W. O. Nicklas, of Franklin county, went to Baltimore on the errand of trying to settle the theories that the woman had been murdered.

On their arrival they found Mr. McCabe waiting for them and at once tried to secure permission for the exhumation of the remains. The Health Board authorities made considerable trouble about this and it was not until Wednesday night that the necessary permission was obtained.

Thursday morning the Undertaker Mr. Pitner, was asked to secure a competent and well esteemed surgeon to perform the autopsy and he recommended Dr. A. L. Wesels, a surgeon of much prominence and one who for 14 years had done post mortem work, a recognized authority in such matters. Mr. McCabe was satisfied and going to Mountain Park Cemetery the autopsy was performed by Dr. Wesels in the crematory, in the presence of Dr. Joseph P. Maclay, the Franklin county coroner.

The official report of the post mortem examination is a lengthy document and the surgeon in charge made affidavit to it.

In brief it shows the larynx normal and in position but very tubercular. The lungs were badly affected by tuberculosis. The back of the neck was opened and the vertebrae found normal intact, nothing approaching a fracture.

The surgeon and Coroner Maclay agreed that the death of the woman was due to a pulmonary hemorrhage.

As a result of the evidence brought out at the hearing in which Herbert Lewis, charged with the robbery of the McCabe residence at Pen Mar, and many rumors the autopsy was held in Baltimore for the use of the district attorney in the criminal case. It is now altogether unlikely that a murder charge will be brought. Lewis is in jail at Chambersburg.

FIREMEN'S CONVENTION

The people of Waynesboro, are making great preparations for a big time in Waynesboro, the occasion being the eleventh annual convention of the Cumberland Valley Volunteer Fire men, which will continue for three days, June 4th, 5th and 6th.

The convention will be somewhat of an old home week for Waynesboro, and with this in view nearly every family in the town will invite their friends from a distance to come home and share the festivities. The convention proper will be held in the forenoon on Tuesday, the opening day, and at two o'clock p. m. there will be an automobile parade. At seven o'clock in the evening the Wayne Band of forty five pieces will give a free concert in the public square.

Wednesday at 1:30 the firemen's parade will take place, participated in by probably the greatest number of companies ever assembled in the valley at one time. At four o'clock Wednesday afternoon the steam engine contest will take place and at seven in the evening band contests in the public square, open to the world.

Thursday will also be devoted to contests. Thursday morning at nine o'clock the prize drill will take place. At ten o'clock the hook and ladder contest. At one o'clock the hose races and at seven in the evening another concert by the famous Wayne Band.

About $2000.00 have been set aside for prizes. These prizes will not only be awarded to the firemen but several hundred dollars have been allowed for band contests and $100.00 for automobile contests.

DON'T fail to attend the annual strawberry festival on the College Campus Saturday evening.

ASPERS

Aspers, May 17—Thomas Kennedy expects to raise his large barn by the middle of next week.

Mrs. John Carey and children spent Wednesday with relatives around Mt. Tabor.

Arthur Cook has had concrete walks laid in his yard and has finished grading his entire yard, making a very big improvement.

Mrs. D. B. Myers and son, Grover, of Gardners Station, spent Tuesday with her daughter, Mrs. Chas. Peters, at this place.

Edward Morehead was very ill part of last week, but has now recovered and is at work again.

Mervin Spangler and a force of hands are sawing a large contract of shingles for Thad K. Rinehart, who intends roofing his large barn and farm house.

A shepherd dog belonging to N. C. Deatrick went mad one day last week and after a long chase by several gunners the dog was finally killed.

Edward Black, who purchased the A. N. Wierman farm, is busy planting the hills in peach and apple trees.

Henry Roth has forty six hens from which he frequently gets forty five eggs daily.

There will be preaching this Sunday evening at Mt. Tabor by the pastor, Rev. F. L. Stine.

John A. Fohl is now at Gardners Station working at the new canning factory being erected at that place.

A few of our farmers are through planting corn but many more have little or no plowing for corn done.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Test, of Bendersville, have returned home after spending some time in York.

Miss Ida Fohl and friend, of Bendersville, have returned home after spending some time in York and other places of interest.

Joseph Spangler, of Aspers, spent Friday in Harrisburg.

Mrs. Allen Fohl and son, Claire, have returned to Biglerville, after spending some time in York.

CASHTOWN

Cashtown, May 17—On Monday morning the barn of D. A. Mickley was raised. Everything fit up nicely and it was soon set up ready for rafters which could not be set owing to the storm but they were put on the next morning and the carpenters will complete the building in a short time.

We noticed in The Times about the prayer post cards which have been received in Gettysburg and other places. There have been quite a number received in this place but there has been little attention given to them as they have been thrown into waste baskets. Everybody thinks it is a fake and the time spent for that writing is lost.

Dr. J. E. Diehl, of Trenton, N. J., is spending several days with his parents in this place.

M. O. Mickley, who is employed in the Frick shops at Waynesboro, is home for a few days.

James Kint, of Mt. Hope, spent last Sunday at the home of C. W. Felix.

Dr. Trout and wife, of Fairfield, were in town on Wednesday.

The farmers are very busy working in the ground, getting out their spring crops. There are a number spreading lime which they bought in sacks. They use a spreader which does very fine work.

Cleaning up day in our town was a decided success. The committee in charge deserves much credit for so successfully planning the work as do also the citizens for co-operating so heartily. It was a delight to see men, women and children interested in making the town look its very best, always beautiful because our men have interested themselves in planting shade trees and the ladies in growing such quantities of flowers. The town was made unusually attractive by being swept and garnished on every side. In the evening the League rooms were filled with friends of the clean-up movement who were served with sandwiches and coffee.

RICHESON MUST DIE IN CHAIR

Minister-Murderer's Last Hope Vanishes.

WILL GET NO CLEMENCY

Alienists Find Him Sane and Slayer of Avis Linnell Will Be Executed.

Boston, May 17. — Clarence V. T. Richeson must die. Governor Foss, after receiving the opinions of the alienists who examined the prisoner, read them carefully.

The governor caused the announcement to be made that executive clemency would not be extended. Richeson will be executed some time early next week, that is, after midnight on Sunday.

The exact time when he will be put to death by electricity is a matter of discretion with General Bridges, warden of the state prison. He is allowed the entire week to follow the instructions of the court.

Governor Foss issued a statement in regard to the case. It shows that the opinion of all the alienists, those employed by the state, by the governor personally and by the defense, all agree that Richeson was not insane when he committed the crime and is not at the present time.

The doctors informed the governor that while the prisoner's antecedents were mentally not of the best and he himself had exhibited abnormalities at times, it could not be said that he was irresponsible when he committed the crime, or that he is now legally insane.

The statement is as follows: "Executive clemency will not be extended in the case of Clarence V. T. Richeson. The prisoner was sentenced on his own confession and without a trial for a crime which it appears impossible that any normal man could commit."

"After his confession and sentence a plea of insanity was set up by his counsel and strongly supported by affidavits extending over his life. The character of these affidavits left no other course for the governor than to submit these and the prisoner himself to an examination by our leading alienists, in order to protect the commonwealth from the charge that the man was actually insane when the deed was committed as well as at the present time."

"The evidence shows that Richeson's family is heavily afflicted with insanity, that he himself is neurotic, a somnambulist and a neurasthenic; that he is subject to extreme emotional disturbances, marked by loss of memory, which two alienists have diagnosed as hysterical insanity, one physician adding the alternative term of hysterical delirium and the majority opinion indicating that these attacks are hysterical attacks, marked by extreme emotional disturbances of brief duration, with loss of memory during the attack and for a varying period following it."

"The evidence, however, while clearly revealing these attacks, indicates that his crime was not committed by him during such an attack. Therefore, while there is some divergence of opinion among the alienists as to whether these attacks indicate actual insanity, there is sufficient ground for the conclusion that he is accountable for his crime, and that the exercise of executive clemency in this instance would be contrary to the public good."

TWO TITANIC WAIFS GREET GLAD MOTHER

She Arrives in New York to Get "Lolo" and "Lump."

New York, May 17.—The end of that chapter of the Titanic disaster that had to do with the rescue of two little boys and the mystery surrounding their identity, was furnished through the arrival of the children's mother from abroad.

The three, mother and two little boys were brought together. There was unmistakable and joyous recognition. Not in the annals of the Children's society does there exist a record of as happy a reunion as occurred there when Mrs. Michel Navratil, of Nice, France, called to claim Lolo and Lump, the waifs of the White Star liner that ran into an ice berg and was sunk at sea.

From the time they were brought back to New York from Philadelphia several days ago, Lolo and Lump have been watching the door of the nursery on the fifth floor of the Children's society building. Each night they went to sleep with tearful disappointment, though expectant that she would surely appear in the morning.

A noise in the hallway caught Lolo's ear and he clapped his hands and caught hold of his brother and drew him nearer. He had made no mistake. Somebody was coming—and it was "muvver." And so it was. The knob of the door turned and in she walked.

Lolo, releasing his hold on his little brother, sprang across the room into his mother's arms. The boy buried his head in his mother's lap and cried. Lump stood quietly by for a moment. Then as the clouded recollection of his mother suddenly cleared and the full memory of her came to him, Lump crowded into her arms beside Lolo.

"My babies," said Mrs. Navratil. "My Michel; my Edmund!" she laughed, turning to Miss Margaret Hays, their rescuer, and to Miss Rose Bruno, of Philadelphia, and Superintendent Walsh, of the Children's society, who had followed her into the room.

Mrs. Navratil was separated from her husband and a suit for separation was pending. It was arranged that the father should see the children only once a month. On Easter Sunday, in charge of their godfather, the two boys were taken to call on Michel Navratil. That was the last the distracted mother saw of them until Thursday. The father changed his name to Hoffman and sailed on the Titanic.

ELECTED MODERATOR

Rev. Dr. Matthews Chosen by Presbyterian Gathering.

Louisville, Ky., May 17. — Rev. Dr. Mark A. Matthews, of Seattle, Wash., was elected moderator at the 124th general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America on the first ballot at its organization here.

The other aspirants for the honor were Rev. Dr. James G. K. McClure, of Chicago, and Rev. Dr. Frank Woodford Sneed, of Pittsburg. Dr. Matthews is a southern man and was connected with the Presbyterian Church South until his work took him to the north.

PAID $25 TO BURN PROPERTY

Accused Man Confesses to Firing Dwelling House and Store.

York, Pa., May 17. — Detective Charles S. White wrung a confession from Charles Doll, of Red Lion, that on April 4 last he burned a dwelling house and store in Dallastown in order that the owner might obtain the insurance.

Doll says that he was paid $25 on the installment plan. The property was insured for $2400.

SUBMARINE FAST ON JERSEY COAST

The C 2 Runs Aground Off Longport.

MAY PROVE A TOTAL LOSS

Fourteen Men Rescued, But Commander, Employed by Builder, and Four Others Refuse to Leave.

Atlantic City, N. J., May 17. — The submarine C 2, a new vessel not yet delivered to the United States government, ran aground three miles off Longport. The vessel is in a desperate condition and probably will be a total loss.

Fourteen members of the crew on board the vessel were brought ashore, while Captain S. Danenhower, an employee of the firm building the boat, and four others refused to leave, despite the critical condition of their vessel. They sent a message for a revenue cutter to be summoned in the hope of saving the submarine.

After refusing aid from the Longport life saving crew and after the crew had returned to their station, the submarine, whose official classification is C 2, although it bears the christened name of Tunar, again signalled for assistance.

While the rain was falling and the sea was running high, two crews of government life savers, one from Ocean City, under Captain George Blackman, and another from the Great Egg Harbor station at Longport, went out again and brought fourteen men from the stranded submarine.

Captain S. Danenhower and the other four men refused to leave the boat. Two of the men were engineers, Wilson and Eckland, one a quartermaster, James Meyers, and the other Parkes, a sailor.

The fourteen men taken off arrived at the Great Egg Harbor life saving station and were given dry clothing, shelter and food.

The transfer at sea was extremely hazardous and was accomplished by running in close with the boat of the Ocean City crew. Afterward a second transfer was made to the Great Egg Harbor gasoline power lifeboat. Every move was attended by the greatest danger, for the breakers were high, although there was not much wind.

Captain Danenhower remained on the wreck when the life savers told him the boat, which had struck a quicksand shoal, was in imminent danger of destruction. He said he had filled all the tanks on the submarine, by which the boat is submerged, and it was his idea that this weight of water in the hull of the Tunar would cause the submarine to rest solidly in the sand.

She was rolling, however, when the Egg Harbor power boat left with the fourteen men rescued. Further the captain explained that he whistled for assistance only when he found that he was powerless to move his boat. He thought one of the propellers was crippled and that this had disarranged the propelling machinery.

Immediately upon reaching a position where signals could be seen through the rain, Captain Blackman, of the Egg Harbor crew, sent for a revenue cutter to aid. This cutter is supposed to be on the way, but if the conditions should become worse, the boat, lying as it does, might spring a leak, and death might be the fate of the five men aboard.

The submarine had gone out from Bridgeport, Conn., on her trial trip, service at sea being required by the government as a test. The crew on board was consequently not made up of naval men, as supposed at first, but of employees of the Lake Torpedo Boat company.

The Ocean City life saving crew is standing by the wreck waiting for the arrival of the revenue cutter.

Hearing of the mishap, hundreds of visitors boarded cars from Atlantic City and went to the Longport station, where they could get a view of the old craft. Probably no wreck on the Atlantic coast ever created as much excitement. Only her signaling mast and conning tower showed at high water.

BIBLE OUTPUT GROWS

American Society Distribution Increases Almost 500,000 in Year.

New York, May 17.—The American Bible society issued its ninety-sixth annual report, and announced that an increase of 459,479 volumes was issued over the preceding year.

The report dwells upon the number of translations of parts of the Bible into strange languages throughout the world.

The total number of volumes issued during the year amounted to 3,691,201, and consist of 430,098 Bibles, 670,728 Testaments and 2,590,375 portions of the Bible. More than 94,000,000 volumes have been issued by the society during its existence.

OCCUPIES BUT SMALL SPACE

Novel Tray Accessory is the "Three-in-One" Complete and Inexpensive Outfit.

Something new in nickelware is the "three-in-one" tray accessory. It consists of a tea or coffee pot, cream jug and sugar bowl, each so made that it fits above the other, thus forming a unique whole. It is complete and inexpensive. Often it is hard to arrange a small breakfast or invalid's tray in an inviting fashion without crowding the various pieces of china and silver together. This little nickel device will be found a great help, and give at the same time a novel air to the tray, causing the invalid's eyes to brighten with pleasure.

A nickel or copper plated percolator, to be attached with cord to the gas jet, is something that will be found convenient to use under the tea kettle or chafing dish, thus doing away with the troublesome alcohol lamp, which many nervous women do not care to use.

For traveling, too, this gas percolator will be found very handy, as it is often enjoyable to give a "chafing dish supper" in one's own apartments, and with this new device all the annoyance of carrying around or using alcohol is avoided. There is nothing whatever to do but adjust the percolator, put the tube over the gas jet, and light the light.

Nickel-plated vegetable dishes now come on the order of silver ones, only many times less expensive. Some of these are made with divided porcelain dishes inside and a tiny hole, into which the hot water is run to keep the vegetables hot while on the serving table.

MEANS SAVING IN ICE BOX

Refrigerating Pipe Shelves Make Use of Drip From the Cool Regions Above Them.

Forming the food racks of a refrigerator out of a continuous line of piping receiving the drip from the ice compartment is an ingenious means adopted to utilize the cool water from

For a Polished Table.

To keep a polished table in good condition it must be rubbed every day with a very soft, dry leather. This is a wonderful polish. I will, of course, suppose that "my lady" uses the little mats of various kinds which are sold to put under the hot plates, otherwise her table will soon be ruined. I must caution against spilt drops of soda water! These are far worse than wine, and leave a nasty furred mark to mar the polished surface. At the end of the day there will always be found a few incidental marks, and these should be carefully rubbed off before the table is covered up for the night.

He Came Back

Willaber heard the door of his private office open and was conscious that some one had crossed the room and stood at his elbow, but he finished what he was writing, without looking up. Then when he had carefully blotted the line he swung about in his chair. A thickset man with a pale face and close-cropped hair stood before him nervously twisting his hat.

"Dick!" cried Willaber. He sprang from his chair, grasped the visitor's hand and shook it warmly.

"So you remember me, do you, Fred?"

"Remember you? As if I could forget you! Why, man, there has not been a day for the last two years that I have not thought of you!"

"Yes, it has been two years. Two long—"

"Say, do you remember Knowlson's white cherry tree? And Lents' peach orchard? I certainly am glad to see you again! Sit down. You must go to lunch with me! I want to talk over old times! Say, was there a worse pair of boys in the whole village than we were?"

"The neighbors didn't think so, Fred. But I don't want to talk over these times."

"How does it happen—"

"The governor made me a present of a pardon. I was turned loose New Year's morning."

"Well, isn't that fine! It was a shame you were ever imprisoned. I knew you were not guilty. You couldn't be."

"Yes, I was guilty, Fred."

"You—what!"

"Yes," said the other, a note of hopelessness in his voice. "I only got what was coming to me."

"Why, Dick!"

"Well!"

"I—I am sorry. But never mind, you are free now. You will never do such a thing again."

"Do you believe that?"

"I know it! Have you seen your wife?"

"It was the first place I went, of course."

"Have you told her?"

"That I was guilty? Yes."

"How old is the little girl now?"

"Claribel is three now."

"That's great! And you're going to start all over again and the three of you will be just as happy as toads in a barrel."

"That is what I came to see you about, Fred."

"I'm mighty glad you thought of me the first thing. Tell me what I can do."

"I answered an advertisement for a place in a grocery house this morning, and the job has been promised me provided I can get a letter of reference. I asked if a letter from you would do, and the manager told me it would be as good as gold. The place will be held open until noon."

"Did you tell him—"

"That I had been a convict? You don't understand. That would queer me in a minute. I have got to have a chance to prove that I am on the square before I let that be known."

"I—see."

"You will recommend me, Fred?"

"What can I say?"

"Don't you believe me to be honest?"

"I certainly do."

"Then, you'll do it! By George, you always were the squarest—"

"It wouldn't be right."

"Oh, well, I suppose you know best. I was a fool to hope that you would help me. You are like all the rest. A man whose foot has slipped ought to reform and lead an upright life and all that sort of thing, but you won't help him do it. But I'll show you!"

"Show me what, Dick?"

"Show you that I will make good in spite of you and your kind."

"Wait a minute, old friend—"

"Wait? To hear a sermon and get a package of advice? No, I'll go home and tell Nellie that the old friendship from which I had hoped for so much never really existed. I must make my own chance."

"I don't want to preach to you, old boy. Here, let me read you what I was assistant to superintendent in a factory; must furnish references; at office of Wilfred A. Willaber. Do you see, Dick? I couldn't ask other what I wouldn't do to myself. That was going into tomorrow's paper, but I believe I'll tear it up now."

"Fred, you can't mean—"

"Can you work tomorrow, Dick?"

"Fred, I—"

"That's all right. I think I am mighty lucky to get a man I know and can trust. Come, I'll show you what I can do. Do you know, only yesterday I was thinking of you, and the time you got hung up by the trousers in Knowlson's cherry tree!"

Swift's Joke on Partridge.

Partridge, the almanac maker, who taught Old Moore his business, will be remembered as the victim of an extraordinary practical joke played on him by Dean Swift.

Against Partridge's almanac for 1708 the dean published a rival almanac, predicting Partridge's death on March 29, about 11 at night, of a raging fever. And on March 30 appeared a pamphlet giving an account of the almanac maker's death with his confession that he was an impostor. This was followed by Swift's "Elegy on the Death of Mr. Partridge," which so completely deceived him at the Stationers company struck off the riddle of the rolls and applied an injunction against the publication of an almanac in his name.

Partridge ascertained that he "was not only alive, but was also alive on March 29." But no one, he said, had saved him. —London Chronicle.

EIGHT NEW BISHOPS FOR METHODISTS

Episcopacy Committee's Report is Adopted.

Minneapolis, Minn., May 17.—The episcopacy committee of the Methodist Episcopal church recommended the election of eight new bishops of the church.

The report was adopted by the conference practically without discussion. The general conference was directed to prepare ballots for the election of the bishops.

Fixing the number of bishops to be elected at eight means only three more than the present effective board. Two died since the last general conference, and the retirement of Bishops Warren, Moore and Neely gave a net reduction of five since the last general conference.

The number selected means the cutting down of the additional number of episcopal residences which had been practically agreed upon. The new residences selected at first were: Copenhagen, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Helena and Kansas City. Mexico City was a probable residence, and Rome was to take the place of Zurich, Switzerland.

Automatic retirement by time limit for bishops, which had been advocated by delegates, probably will be favorably acted upon. Additional impetus was given the project by the pathetic appeal made by Bishop David H. Moore in his address to the conference after he had been voted retired. Such a resolution is now before the committee on episcopacy and will be reported out.

SUES FOR $1,500,000

Coal Company Claims Heavy Damages From Lehigh Valley.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 17.—The suit for the largest sum of money ever started in this county was entered when the Ridgeway Coal company sued for $1,500,000 damages against the Lehigh Valley Railroad company.

The loss is alleged to have been sustained from October, 1909, to the present date by the refusal of the railroad to build a switch to the Ridgeway company's workings in New Port township.

The coal company built an extension of its own to the tracks of the Lackawanna railroad at Breslau, but the Lehigh Valley obtained an injunction.

Housecleaning Hints.

To clean piano keys moisten a soft cloth by dipping it first in lemon juice, then in silver whitening and rub briskly on the ivory.

White paint is cleaned satisfactorily by rubbing it with a cloth dipped in hot water, then in a saucer of bran. The bran acts as a soap, does not injure the paint and restores the gloss.

Remove verdigris from metal by polishing it with a soft cloth dipped in ammonia.

WHITE ADVISES MINERS TO YIELD

Urges Anthracite Men to Accept Agreement.

OTHER LEADERS FOR PEACE

President of Union Declares Strike Would Disrupt Organization in Its Present Condition.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 17.—A strong plea advising the miners to accept the proffered peace terms as the best possible solution of the prolonged struggle with the anthracite operators, was made before the convention by John P. White, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

President White repeatedly warned against a strike and its consequences. He believed a strike would seal the death knell of the union in the hard coal fields more than the acceptance of the tentative agreement.

"Some have referred to the probable funeral of the union if we accept," he said in his final remarks, "but if your decision is not to sanction the agreement, you might also sound the death knell."

White produced cold facts that were apparently a revelation to many of his hearers. He told of the numerical and financial weakness of the union in the anthracite fields, and said the membership represents fewer than 30,000 of the 170,000 workers.

White told the men that the agreement was the best that they could obtain; that if he had 100,000 union hard coal miners behind him instead of only 25,000 he possibly could have wrung more from the employers. The proposed agreement, he declared, contained more than they have gained in the last ten years, and that it represented substantial progress in the forward movement of the mine workers in the United States for better wages and conditions.

White defended several of the clauses in the tentative plans, but did not discuss them in detail. "When you talk about funerals," he said, "if you speak the truth, there should have been several funerals in these regions since 1902. You have not supported the union as you should."

The closed shop and the check-off system of obtaining dues from the wages of the employees, White represented as "what is needed." When these are obtained he believed the union would be in a position to fight and not until then.

"Accept the handwork of your executive officers," he advised, "or be responsible for the consequences."

"I hope," he said finally, "that no matter what your decision, the union will live on to wage the battle for the oppressed and the weak in the coal mines of this country."

Other Leaders For Peace.

John T. Dempsey, president of district No. 1, addressed the convention in support of the tentative agreement. He heartily endorsed the address delivered by White. Dempsey said the concessions were the best obtainable without a strike, against which he cautioned. He said that he, White and other officers of the union had returned from deliberating with the operators with a proposed agreement, that in a way, recognizes the organization in dealing with miners' grievances over wages, etc.

He suggested that never before in the hard coal fields had the union received one penny offer of advance by the operators without striking for it.

John Fahy, president of district No. 9, also urged acceptance of the terms "as the best we are able to get unless we strike or throw our fate into the hands of a reconvened anthracite coal strike commission. I oppose such a course. Their work was not for the best interests of the workers."

Fahy became eloquent in his plea for peace and was often interrupted by applause. "If you had supported and remained faithful to your organization," he said, "you would now be in a position to get all your demands. I know that the conditions contained in these propositions are not all you deserve. But as they are, they are the best you have ever had in these anthracite fields."

"It takes more than willingness to win a strike. It takes money with which to feed hungry mouths; when you haven't got it the bravest will falter. When you haven't got it for your children what will you do to answer their cries for bread? We have no in the treasuries of our organization money with which to conduct a strike. Let that sink in; don't come to us later and say you didn't know it. This proposition before you to day brings us closer to negotiating with the operators than ever before in our history. Rather than strike, the advisable thing to do is to accept it."

Thomas Kennedy, president of district No. 7, the next speaker, complimented Fahy's oratory. He said: "Strikes are to be condemned, but also have their good features. For the first time in the history of the anthracite fields Mr. Baer was forced to come down from his stand that none of the demands was to be granted. The position I have taken is, let the men decide what is to be done and then let the officers buckle on the armor and carry out your will. You are the men to work under these propositions. You are the men, therefore, to decide."

AUTO LABORATORY

WINS $3000 PRIZE

Other Inventions to Aid Wounded Soldiers.

Washington, May 17.—The first prize of $3000 for the best invention for lessening the suffering of sick and wounded soldiers, from the fund established by the empress of Russia, was awarded by the International Red Cross conference to Dr. Louis Lesage, of Necker hospital, Paris, for a portable X-ray laboratory automobile for carrying wounded men from battle fields.

Two second prizes, of $1500 each, went to Major Riggensbach, Switzerland, for a wheeled and folding stretcher, and to G. Steindorf, Germany, for a bicycle stretcher.

Third prizes, of $500 each, were given to Captain Henry L. Brown, U. S. A.; Colonel Pick, Austria; Dr. Glinsky, Russia; Major Halloran, U. S. A.; L. Linxweiler, Germany, and Lieutenant Roselli, Lieutenant Colonel Tachetti and Colonel Abbandoni, of the medical corps, Rome, Italy, the last three having participated in a joint invention.

NO TAFT WITHDRAWAL

Even Loss of Ohio Would Not Cause President to Quit Race.

Cleveland, May 17.—President Taft does not intend to withdraw from the presidential race even should he lose Ohio.

"That's hypodermic," declared Gu Karger, Taft's publicity agent, an spokesman, commenting in the Taft car on the story from Washington that the president contemplated quitting if he was defeated in Ohio. This picturesque language was taken to mean that the story was "a pipe dream."

Colonel Roosevelt's claim that he had 507 delegates and would be nominated on the first ballot was labelled "absurd" by members of the Taft party. Similarly was Roosevelt's declaration that he will carry Ohio ruled.

AFTER ALUMINUM TRUST

Government Begins Suit to Dissolve the Corporation.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 17.—The government began a suit to dissolve the Aluminum Company of America known as the aluminum trust.

The bill of equity was filed in the federal court for the district of western Pennsylvania by Special Assistant Attorney General Chatland, of the department of justice, and Federal District Attorney John S. Jordan.

Bets $20,000 on Roosevelt.

Washington, May 17.—A local banker and broker announces that he has $20,000 on deposit to wager at even money that Roosevelt will carry Ohio over President Taft at the primaries next week.

Votes of Women Make Widow Mayor.

Sheridan, Wyo., May 17.—Mrs. Susie Wessler, a widow, has been elected mayor of Dayton, Wyo., on the independent ticket. A majority of votes were cast by women.

MOST USEFUL RECIPES

PREPARATIONS ON WHICH ONE MAY SURELY RELY.

From Successful Housewives' Own Cookery Books, and the Writer Who Makes Them Public is a Well-Known Authority.

You will find sure reliance in these recipes because they are from the successful housewives' own cookery books and the little "lady-like" touches, in the way of combining and flavoring and serving are practical and will please the amateur or the professional.

Scallops in Batter—Have this on Monday, as it may be made from cold beef or roast veal or any sliced cold meat. Cut in half-inch thick slices and brown in hot butter, season with salt and pepper, add all the gravy that was left and thicken with flour rubbed smooth in cold water. Set aside while you make the batter with a cup of flour, two-thirds of a cup of milk, one egg beaten light, a pinch of salt, a heaping teaspoon of yeast powder.

Put the meat and gravy in as many small dishes as you have persons to serve and cover with the batter and bake until browned, or bake in one large dish.

Beef Frizzies—Cut thin dried beef, that has been freshed in cold water into strips with the kitchen scissors and brown in bubbling butter. When it browns a little sprinkle on a tablespoon of flour and stir about with a fork while the flour browns. Pour in a cup and a half of cold milk, continue stirring until thick and smooth; pepper but do not salt. Mince green peppers may be added to this while it is cooking if their flavor is liked.

Corned Beef and Potato Cakes—Chop two cups of cold boiled corned beef in a bowl and season with pepper, add mashed potatoes to equal the amount of meat and one egg beaten, roll into a loaf or shape into cakes and fry brown; serve with young beets dressed with butter fat.

Another way to use the meat and potatoes is to enrich the mashed potatoes with egg and cream and butter and form them into a mound in the center of a platter. Chop the meat, corned beef is excellent for this, and lay it around the meat for a border. Sprinkle all with pepper, parsley, chopped fine and butter, and grate cheese over the top of the potatoes. Set under the broiler burner until a dark brown and hot through.—Henrietta D. Grauch, Domestic Science Lecturer.

Beefsteak and Spaghetti.

Slice two onions and two green mango peppers and fry in two tablespoons of butter; add one pound of round steak, cut fine, and cook until slightly brown, then add small can tomatoes; salt to taste and add as much paprika as you like. Let this simmer about one hour. Use as sauce well cooked spaghetti or macaroni. Grated cheese may be sprinkled over this.

CHAPTER I.

In the Diamond Horseshoe. A girl's scream clashed with the soprano's high note in the Jewel Song, and in a moment the Metropolitan Opera House was in confusion. The cry, half suppressed, broke the spell peculiar to a "Faust" night. The somewhat portly Marguerite, her voice soaring like a cage-bird suddenly freed, was decking her stage person with the glistening stage gems left on her scenic doorstep by the suave of devils. As the singer hung about her neck the rope of pearls with which Mephisto planned to fetter her soul, Mrs. Missioner, swinging her fan with a freer motion, struck the slenderest part of her diamond collar. The blow was sharp. The golden thread on which the choicest of the Missioner jewels in their perforated settings were strung, snapped. Instantly most of the freed drops of frozen fire that constituted Mrs. Missioner's magnificent necklace—the one with the Maharanee diamond—were rolling on the floor of the box.

Mrs. Missioner, as the little scream broke from Dorothy March, a debutante she had taken under her wing for the evening, clutched at the few diamonds that fell into her lap. Miss March drew her skirts tightly about her ankles and sprang into a corner of the box, making room for the man who sprang to Mrs. Missioner's aid. Before another moment sped, Curtis Griswold was on his knees scooping together the scattered jewels with snow-gloved hands. Bruxton Sands, slower of movement, bent with more dignity to the task. In the next box, separated from Mrs. Missioner's only by a low velvet rail, a man of Oriental features and complexion turned to watch the scramble for the jewels. Though he did not stir from his place, his hawk-like face seemed to thrust itself into the center of the excited group.

"Continue! Continue!" the singer urged, as she bent her gaze from the box to the conductor.

"What's the matter? Go on! Go on!" the stage manager cried in undertones from the wings. Ushers in the back of the house sought to cover the confusion with ill-timed applause. The moment was big with potential tragedy. One cry of "Fire!" might have sent those thousands of startled women and men battling along the aisles in an elemental fury of self-preservation. Mere prolongation of the situation without that terrible tocsin might have ended in a smaller panic. But the liquid tones of the soprano soaring again in the pyrotechnics of the Jewel Song reclaimed the attention of the audience. The conductor, evidently eager to hide his own momentary loss of pulse, fairly lifted his men through the intricacies of the accompaniment. Promptness of action by the stage manager restored order behind the scenes.

Nothing of all those incidents struck the sense of anyone in the Missioner box. All four of its occupants were concerned for the immediate recovery of the diamonds that had sprung from Mrs. Missioner's neck to her lap, and then stamped across the floor. Griswold, still on his knees, rescued the greater number. Sands, a man of action as well as of millions, picked up the larger gems. Miss March sprang further into her corner of the box, and dragged her petticoats ever more closely until her immature form seemed chiseled in tulle.

"Look in all the corners—look everywhere," Mrs. Missioner urged. "There's one behind the chair," she pointed.

"There's another," cried Dorothy, pointing at Griswold's feet. A glance from the dark stranger in the next box directed the searchers toward still another part of the floor, and every move was rewarded by the recovery of a gleaming stone. One by one, by twos, by threes, the diamonds were gathered, and still the search went on. Fast as they scooped them up, Sands and Griswold poured the glittering treasure into Mrs. Missioner's lap.

"Are they all there?" asked the millionaire.

"No, no," answered the widow. "There are several more. Please look again—look everywhere. Dorothy, help me count them."

Griswold and Sands renewed their search, peering into the remotest corners, pushing chairs about, looking, reaching, gasping with the zeal of Klondikers, urged again and again by the owner of the jewels.

The glittering horseshoe of the Metropolitan deserves its name. The Kafirs of Kimberly, the pearl-divers of Polynesia, the gold-seekers of the Klondike, the diggers into earth's secrets the world over toil ceaselessly to maintain the brilliance of that big jewel show. They send their diamonds and rubies and emeralds and sapphires, their pearls and opals and gold, to gleam on the heads and breasts and gowns of women who are the industry of one generation, or the stock-market luck of another, the crowned with riches. A night at the opera is a parade of the wonders gems can work and of that which, too often, gems can buy.

In all that electric sparkle, no gems outshone the Missioner jewels, of which the necklace Mrs. Missioner wore that night was the masterpiece. For in its center blazed the famous Maharanee diamond.

"I think we've found them all," said Sands, rising and emptying his cupped hand into the miniature mountain in Mrs. Missioner's lap.

Sands and Griswold returned to their chairs. Reluctantly realizing the thrilling little by-scene was at an end, the other members of the audience again focused their attention on the stage. Mephisto befuddled Dame Martha, Faust won Marguerite, and the curtain descended on an operatic triumph, only to be raised and lowered and raised again as boxes, orchestra and balconies recalled the singers for their need of praise.

As they passed, bowing and smiling before the curtain, a low cry came from Mrs. Missioner's throat.

"O-o-o-h!" she exclaimed, half-rising in her excitement, "the largest of all is gone! The Maharanee!"

Instantly the turmoil was renewed. Dorothy sprang to her feet and, before either of the men could anticipate her, began pushing the chairs about until all save Mrs. Missioner's were grouped in a corner of the box. Then the little debutante, regardless of her fluff frock, raked the floor with her fan, with her free hand, her feet, in almost hysterical quest of the still missing diamond. Griswold, nearly as excited as the women, recommenced his own search.

All the action in Sands leaped to the fore. Stretching a long arm across the bent backs of Griswold and little Miss March, he thrust a thumb against an electric button.

"It can't be in the box," he said decisively, and when a breathless usher rapped on the door, the millionaire tore it open and whispered: "Run down to the orchestra and look everywhere around this box. A diamond has fallen over the rail."

"Dorothy Dorothy, I cannot go until we find it," sobbed Mrs. Missioner. The woman who, with a sweep of her pen, could summon all the artists who had sung their souls out on the stage to sing as soulfully in her salon, who, with another pen-sweep, could recompense them beyond their most arrogant demands, was in tears because she had lost a diamond.

But such a diamond! Its prisoned fire held the history of an alien race. "After all," said Griswold in a swift aside to Dorothy, "she has recovered the other gems, and even if she cannot find this one—"

"Don't you know?" returned little Miss March excitedly. "Don't you really know, Mr. Griswold?"

"Know what, Miss March?" asked the clubman.

"Why, the history of that stone! Don't you know Mrs. Missioner's husband bought it from a Maharanee, that they brought it all the way from India? Don't you know it's the finest diamond in America?"

Griswold shook his head. He was pursuing the search perfunctorily. His hands were busy, but his eyes roved over the house. Idly he noted the slowly ebbing interest of the audience, the departure of hundreds by twos and threes and larger groups, the thronging toward the lobby for the usual visits between the acts. It was with faint interest that he saw several swarthy faces weaving through the crowd. Had his eyes been able to follow those faces, he would have seen them converse in the corridor behind the box—the box in which sat the Oriental with the face of a hawk.

The hawk watched the Missioner box. So steadily did he direct his gaze at Mrs. Missioner that she was on the point of averting her glance when the stranger's flashlight gaze struck a spark from her memory. She bowed, coolly, as she began the inclination of her head, but in the end graciously. Her dark neighbor was satisfied with that dubious encouragement.

"You are fond of your jewels as ever, I see," he said, in a low tone, as of one claiming a share in intimate memories.

"Yes," she answered with an abstracted air. She was harking back to days long gone, and evidently the recollection was not unpleasant.

"I cannot blame you," said the Oriental. "Every one knows you have the most wonderful jewels in the world—one of them, at any rate."

"These," returned Mrs. Missioner, "are among my very finest diamonds. But they are nothing to the Maharanee, and that is gone."

A leaping flash in the Oriental's eyes soon faded to a gleam of polite interest.

"You are brave," was all he said, "to wear them in public. Many a woman, save in her own ballroom, would content herself with the duplicates."

"Indeed?" There was unmistakable contempt in Mrs. Missioner's tone.

"The Easterner continued, "to recover the Maharanee, too."

Mrs. Missioner had no time for more than another slow bending of her head when the usher who had gone to the orchestra hurried into the box.

"I've looked thoroughly, sir," he said to Sands, "and I can't find the diamond anywhere."

The millionaire slipped a banknote into the man's hand.

"Try again," he said quietly. "There's a good deal more than this in it for you if you find it."

Griswold, as he moved to let the usher pass, stepped backward with such abruptness as to drive his heel sharply down upon something that slipped under his tread like a peach kernel. In the very moment when Mrs. Missioner, resuming her talk with the Oriental, said, with emphasis, "I leave imitations to others," that blundering heel crushed into and through the velvet carpet, crushed, against the unyielding hardwood of the floor, what had been the most conspicuous diamond in all the richly jeweled collarette—crushed it until only a tiny heap of pallid powder lay there, save where a great flake had slipped from the pressure and remained to betray what the little pile of dust had been.

"The Maharanee!" gasped Dorothy.

The widow paled. The light in the Oriental's eyes flared to a flame. With a smile as inscrutable as his thoughts, he leaned across the low partition, picked up a pinch of the powder and the telltale flake and laid them deferentially on Mrs. Missioner's outspread fan.

"Your maid is more cautious," he said, his smile softening slightly, "or, it may be, your jeweler has made a mistake."

Mrs. Missioner did not faint. She only clutched the soft hand of little Miss March so tightly she suppressed a scream. With time there was silence in the Missioner box, for Griswold, even as he began to stammer an apology for his awkwardness, let the words die on his lips as he saw the cruel pallor of the widow's face. The silence of Sands was grim, that of the Oriental suavely self-effacing.

"Then," said Mrs. Missioner at last, in a low, tense tone, "this is—this is—"

"Not the Maharanee diamond," replied the Oriental. "In a sense, madame, I congratulate you."

She stopped him with a look. "This—this thing is—"

"Past!" thundered Sands. "I have been robbed," said Mrs. Missioner in a stifled voice. "Take me home, Bruxton."

(To Be Continued.)

More to Be Remembered. The man of now has much more excuse for making mistakes than did Julius Caesar or Alexander the Great. The world is bigger and there is more in it. There is more to be remembered. There are machines now in everyday use that would have given the Conqueror of Gaul a headache to have even looked at. There is enough complexity in a single business day to drive Alexander into a brainstorm.

WANTED FOUR POUNDS

Drank Water to Gain Weight.

A Chicago man who wanted to join the police force drank enough water just before the examination to bring him up to the standard weight. He was four pounds too light before.

This is a poor way to gain weight—George Muller, Jr., of New York City, knows a much better way. He says: "I was pale and thin for a number of years owing to poor blood. Tried several different remedies but without benefit until I came to Vinol. It is certainly the best tonic I ever bought. My appetite has returned, my weight is increasing right along and I feel at least 100 percent better than I have for a long time."

If you are thin and poor, Vinol will increase your weight and give you new strength. Vinol is our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, and is unequalled as a blood-renewer and body builder, for all who are weak and run down. We guarantee it to please you—if it does not, we give back your money. People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.

POINTERS ON COOKING FISH

Smelts Need Especial Preparation to Get the Best Results—Giving Proper Taste to "Sole."

One of the most satisfactory ways to make smelts both tasty and attractive is to split the fish up the back, take out the bone, remove the eyes or else cut off the heads, and then form each fish into a ring, fastening the head and tail together with a toothpick. Dip the fish into milk and then into fresh bread crumbs and fry in deep fat. Remove the toothpicks before serving and arrange the fish around a mound of potato.

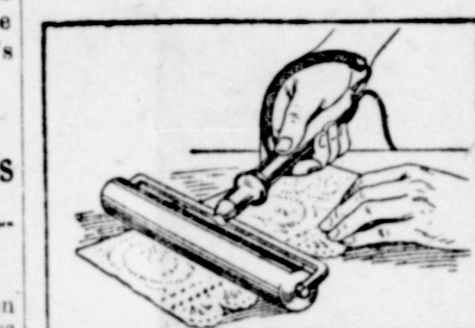

Broiled smelts, with maitre d'hotel sauce seasoned with a little nutmeg, as well as the usual lemon juice and parsley, are delicious. Prepare the fish as for frying—they should be of good size—dip each into melted butter, then roll in bread crumbs, arrange on a fine wire broiler and cook over the fire, first one side and then the other.

If fillets of flounders, commonly known as "sole," are left to lie in salt, parsley, thyme, a sliced onion and lemon juice for half an hour before frying they will take on a flavor much as the French chef gives them. They are best fried in deep fat.

FOR HANDLING DELICATE LACE

Electric Ironing Roller That Is Guaranteed Not to Injure Even the Finest Fabrics.

An electrically heated ironing roller, designed especially for pressing out laces and other delicate fabrics, is here illustrated. The heating elements are contained within the highly polished steel roller, and the current is switched on or off by turning the handle. A roller is much superior to the ordinary flatiron in pressing laces, as there is no danger of the former catching and tearing the lace.—Popular Mechanics.

Electrically Heated Ironing Roller for Pressing Laces.

Roller on or off by turning the handle. A roller is much superior to the ordinary flatiron in pressing laces, as there is no danger of the former catching and tearing the lace.—Popular Mechanics.

Rice Omelet With Cheese Sauce.

One cup of hot boiled rice, two eggs, half a teaspoon of salt, a little pepper, one tablespoon of water, one tablespoon of butter. Separate yolks and whites. Beat yolks until thick, and add rice, salt, pepper and water. Mix well, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Melt butter in omelet pan, turn in the mixture and cook as puff omelet until firm. Before turning from pan spread one-half with a layer of cheese sauce, then fold the other half over and turn omelet onto a hot platter. Pour remaining sauce around omelet and serve at once.

Cheese Sauce—Two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of flour, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one-quarter pepper, one cup milk, one-half cup grated cheese. Prepare white sauce and when ready to serve add grated cheese without boiling until cheese is melted.

Kentucky Ham.

Cut six slices of one-half inch thick from the thick side of a country cured ham. Dredge with flour and pepper, heat the roaster, arrange the slices so they will not touch, bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Pour off half the drippings, to this add four tablespoons of sweet cream and one of coffee. Let boil up, pour over the slices of ham after they are arranged on the platter. Serve hot.

HELPS IN EMERGENCY

PANTRY SHELF OF GREAT VALUE TO HOUSEWIFE.

Should Hold Supply of Canned Goods From Which to Form a "Pickup" Meal When Situation Demands Immediate Action.

Every housekeeper has or should have an emergency shelf where she may keep on hand a small supply of canned goods which can be brought out and used as needed.

Canned salmon is almost sure to have a place on this shelf and the following recipes may offer variety for one who finds it necessary to serve this fish frequently.

Salmon Pudding—One can salmon; 2 eggs; 1 tablespoon milk or water; 1 teaspoon salt; 1½ tablespoons butter; 2 tablespoons flour; 1 cup milk, ¼ tablespoon salt.

Drain the salmon and remove skin and bones. Beat eggs until light, then mix with salmon, milk and salt.

Put in a buttered dish, set in a pan of water and bake in a moderate oven 20 to 25 minutes.

Turn out on a hot platter and pour around it the white sauce which is made by melting the butter and mixing with it the flour and salt, then adding the milk gradually and cooking until it thickens.

Scalloped Salmon—One can salmon; 1 cup bread crumbs; 1 cup white sauce; 1 teaspoon salt, 1 lemon.

Drain the salmon and remove skin and bones. Mix salmon, bread crumbs, white sauce and salt, and put in a buttered dish. Bake 15 to 20 minutes. When done, garnish with half slices of lemon.—Charlotte E. Carpenter, Colorado Agricultural College.

SOAP AND WATER FOR CARPET

Treatment That Will Serve to Give the Floor Covering a New Lease of Life.

To wash the carpet thoroughly you will require a bucket of warm water, a cake of carpet soap, a piece of house-flannel, and, if you are going to tackle a fair-sized piece of carpet at once, a supply of dry cloths.

Do not begin near the door, as you may require to leave the room for fresh water, and it is unwise to walk on the carpet when damp. Make up your mind to do without the room till all is dry. Start washing as far from the door as possible, and work towards it. The flannel is wetted, and a portion of the carpet well rubbed. It must not be overdone, only wetted sufficiently to secure a good lather by rubbing the carpet soap ball well in. Then with the clean, wet flannel remove the soap. Well rinse the flannel afterwards, so that it is quite soapless when you begin again, later on another fresh piece.

No soap must be left in the carpet when the final rubbing commences. Take a dry towel, and rub to your best. Though you cannot get rid of all dampness, you can almost dry the patch with friction, and this brings up the nap beautifully, also the colors.

Delicious Egg Biscuits.

One heaping cup of sugar, a pinch of salt, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, carefully sifted twice, one small rounding tablespoonful of lard; mix lightly. Put one egg in a cup and beat until light, add milk until three-quarters full, pour in and stir until smooth, then put on board and roll out like other biscuit. Be sure and try this.

For Cleaning Silver.

Next time the irksome task of silver cleaning comes around, I mean the bureau silver, that nearly every woman uses, try washing it thoroughly before applying the polish and see how much easier your work will be. Not only will the article polish easier, but the always dirty work will be found infinitely cleaner.—Exchange.

Shirts - 150 dozen - Shirts

1800 Men's and Boy's Shirts

To the 100 dozen advertised before are added the balance of the order, which we hardly expected. These shirts are not the manufacturer's "left overs" or the "undesireables" but were made for November for spring in every respect - from the laundry. 100 dozen have and you are fortunate this additional just now in.

question the best values in SHIRTS we have ever had the privilege to offer - of splendid materials - cut to fit - made as well as any shirt in the market at $1 or $1.50.
